

Exploring the management of change process towards Inclusion in PEI schools

Investigators forming a partnership between members of the PEI teaching community and the Faculty of Education are seeking participants for a study regarding some of the challenges experienced in PEI schools with the implementation of inclusive practices and the process of change this involves.

The investigators are seeking participants who identify as members of the PEI teaching community. You will be asked what challenges you experience and observe as you attempt to integrate inclusive practices into your classroom and your school community.

The interview will take up approximately 60 minutes of your time and can take place at a location of your choice. The interviewing team will have some flexibility in travelling to locations that suit you.

This project has received Ethics approval from UPEI and from Education, Early Learning and Culture, PEI.
